6. Content and structure

The education program consists of two years full-time studies of 120 credits together. The focus is on the development of the students' own photographic work as well as their ability to critically reflect on their own and others' work. Emphasis is placed on the students' knowledge about the practice and theory of the photographic field. A goal of teaching is to create a dynamic between practical work and critical reflection, as well as how the theory is applied in practice.

The teaching takes place in the form of critical classes and individual tutorials where the students' projects are discussed based on various aspects such as technical, formative and contextual; that is, how the presented work relates to other contemporary and historical examples and practitioners. In the theory courses, the teaching is lecture and seminar-based. Course literature is discussed based on its significance for the photographic field and the questions that form the discourse. Stylistic and formal aspects are also highlighted to give examples of how the texts are written and what distinguishes different genres: mainly essays and academic and research-based texts.

The students' own writing forms a central part of the education program, and the master's degree work is ongoing during the first three semesters. During the fourth and last semester the writing is aimed at transforming the essay into an article.

The master's degree course will lead to a graduation exhibition, where the student's degree projects will be publicly displayed. The course also prepares students to work professionally in the photography and art field, among other things by meeting representatives of different professions in the fields, gaining insight into various opportunities for living and by being trained to present their work both verbally and in texts.

During the first academic year, the department organizes a number of elective courses in different areas. In the elective courses, students meet from the department's different programs.
